Author Jennifer Grube gives a voice to trauma survivors in new book

'Whispers of Inspiration' presents a collection of quotes resonating from true to life survivor experiences

PEN ARGYL, Pa. – Author and life-long advocate of children Jennifer Grube has devoted her life to helping others along the path of healing. She has touched the lives of youth and families across the country through leading start-up projects and the stabilization and growth of charitable organizations.

Grube is now giving a voice to trauma survivors and the advocates who work with them through her new book, "Whispers of Inspiration" published through authorhouse through which trauma survivors and advocates can experience an uplifting and motivational tool focused on hope and healing. Each page of "Whispers of Inspiration" shares a compelling survivor story through Grube's personally-written rendition of a quote, contemplation and visual attestation.

John Calvaresi of the National PR Firm notes, "This compelling publication will not only touch lives, but clearly has 'best seller' written all over it. In fact, even prior to its launch, Colorado's world-renowned Craig Hospital has pledged to make this fine book available for patients and families."

Grube believes her book and related coaching services will not only help those in need of healing, but will inspire advocates who support trauma survivors and others who simply need a 'lift.'
